We Can't Pass This One On

As a community we're great ones to call up the mayor or write a letter to the city council when things do not please us, then sit back and let them cope with the situation. And certainly that is the right procedure in many instances. After all, what are they there for? But we should temper our letter writing and telephoning with a certain amount of judgment. There are problems that are beyond the power of the mayor and council to solve because they are problems that belong to you and me and our neighbor, and only you and I and our neighbor can solve them.

The Business Association members arrived at this conclusion at their meeting Wednesday when they raised that ghastly spectre that has been haunting the town since Pearl Harbor—the Post Office Lot Can Dump.

The first reaction of the members was to fall back on the inevitable remedy to every ill, "Let's prod the city council with a letter."

However, one of the members pointed out that P. A. McCreery, when he became mayor, took on the responsibility of assisting Salvage Chairman John Gilbert in getting the Post Office Lot Can Dump cleaned up and in attempting to keep it clean; that if the lot is a "disgrace" now, consider what it was then!

McCreery saw to it that the mountain of scrap, rags, paper, bed springs and rubber boots were removed. Tidy bins were set up, neatly labelled and arrangements were made for regular collection of salvage material. Everything was done that could be done by constituted authority. The rest was up to the community. All that was necessary was for the citizens to prepare the cans properly for salvage so the collectors would pick them up, to place them in the bins provided for them instead of scattering them on the ground and to refrain from dumping garbage, waste paper and rusty cook stoves on the lot.

Some of us, behaving like well raised individuals, washed the labels off our cans, cut off the tops, mashed them flat and placed them in the bin marked, "cans," paying the garbage man to haul off our surplus lettuce leaves and old shoes. Others of us who started life as problem children and never outgrew the habit of thoughtlessness, said "Ah, free dump," and behaved accordingly, though there are signs explaining what is to go in these boxes and we can read, can't we?

Is writing a letter to the city council going to change the habits of grown-up undisciplined brats?

The members of the Business Association thought not. They finally reduced the problem to a matter of explaining and shaming—a job naturally devolving upon the press, they decided, looking hard at the representative of the Pine Cone-Cymbal in attendance.

So we have herewith explained and shamed to the best of our

Carmel America Firster Protests Demo. Club Review of "Under Cover" By Man "Too Yellow" To Sign Book

Carmel, December 16, 1943

Editor The Pine Cone-Cymbal:

As one of the members of "America First" almost from its inception, September 1940, until it disbanded December 12th, 1941, I am using my privilege of "freedom of speech" to protest the article in your paper by Mrs. Low for the Women's Democratic club of Carmel, in a review of a highly seditious book, "Under Cover," by a man living under six aliases, too yellow to sign so scurrilous a publication, defaming as it does the most truly loyal, patriotic members of the Congress of the U.S.A. Both Senators and Representatives are maligned, and the dignity of our most important branch of the Government aspersed.

Army Doctor Says Medical Unit Is Welcome in Italy

Captain Don J. Wilson, just back from fourteen months' service with the U. S. Medical Corps in the Mediterranean theatre of war, is spending a thirty days' sick leave with Mrs. Wilson and their seven-year-old daughter, Donell, in their Ocean avenue home.

Captain Wilson relinquished a lively practice of medicine in Tribune, Kansas, to enter the service three years ago this January, and was with the first contingent of American forces to invade Africa, landing at Casablanca under General Patton. During his year in Africa, he was awarded the Purple Heart for wounds received while saving the life of an American soldier.

With the medical unit attached to the Third Division, he participated in the Sicilian invasion, continuing with the advancing troops on up through Italy, past bombed and occupied Naples, as far as the Volturno River. Posted with his unit as close as possible to the front lines, there is little of the "show" that Captain Wilson has missed—but of things martial he cannot be persuaded to talk of.

In the Cottage by Sterling Bridge Alberto, Forgetful of A Concert Career, Works on His Stage Lyric

BY IRENE ALEXANDER

For well over two decades now the name of David Alberto has been associated with all that is fine and discriminating in the musical life of Carmel. So modest and self-effacing is this Dean of the Pianoforte Art—so shy and unpretentious—that few beyond those whose knowledge of him extends through the years can estimate what he has had to contribute.

My own knowledge goes back to a certain exciting and momentous occasion, long, long ago, when music meant a half hour per day torn from playing games and devoted perforce to the playing of scales and The Jolly Farmer. In the East Bay home of a patron of the arts I sat among an audience gathered in honor of a Child Prodigy, the student of William J. McCoy and a protege of Frank La Forge, the well-known pianist and composer. And the name of that dark-haired boy whose virtuosity opened up new and unimagined vistas for me was David Alberto. In the same audience, and hearing the youthful Alberto for the first time was Xavier Martinez, picturesque in his brown corduroys and flowing red tie, and that occasion marked the beginning of a lifelong friendship between the mature artist of the brush and the boy musician just embarking upon his career.

David Alberto was born in San Francisco of a family identified, for many years with theatrical management in the Bay region, his father and two of his uncles continuing actively engaged in that business throughout his boyhood. His own given name stems from that of the great Belasco, and from the age of five he haunted the old Alcazar Theatre as other boys haunt the baseball dia-

Carmel's one time Chief of Police, Robert Walton, is now headed for Washington to become Chief of Signal Activities of the United States Marines. For over a year Lt. Col. Freed by Japs Gorman Arrives Home in Carmel

Looking forward to his first Christmas in the United States in twenty years, Neil A. Gorman, Gripsholm exchange prisoner arrived home in Carmel Monday with Mrs. Gorman who had gone to New York to meet him when the Red Cross exchange ship arrived December 1.

Helping to make his Christmas merry are his four children, Dennis and Patricia, high school age, and Janet and Jeffrey, twins who attend Sunset, whom he hasn't seen since November 1940 when his firm, the Cal-Tex company, sent them to the United States with Mrs. Gorman because of ever increasing danger in the Orient. Gorman remained on as foreign manager for his company at Tien Tsin. On the outbreak of hostilities between the United States and Japan, he was confined first in the British Concession and later at an internment camp in Shantung Province.

Mrs. Gorman had got only scanty reports of him until she received word late in August of this year that he was to be one of the Gripsholm prisoners.

Of his experiences as a prisoner of the Japanese he maintains a careful silence on orders from the Cal-Tex company and the United States Government, the latter fearful that any unguarded comment on the part of returned nationals might affect the welfare of American prisoners still in the hands of the Japanese.

Instead, he offered a masterpiece of understatement: "You can say I'm glad to get home."

Business Ass'n Carol Sing Grows Into Big Xmas Party

The Carmel Business Association has enlisted the aid of the USO and the Mission Choir, under the direction of Carl Bengberg, in putting on its Christmas Carol Sing, it was announced at the meeting held Wednesday night at La Ribera Hotel.

The party, planned primarily for the entertainment of service men, will be held at Sunset Auditorium Christmas Eve from eight o'clock to nine o'clock and will include several variety acts as well as community carol singing.

Following a report on the activities of the Information Bureau in the past months, election of officers was held, Adolph LaFrenz chosen to serve a second term as president, Eben Whittlesley elect-

Wednesday before leaving for Washington to assume his new duties. With him was Mrs. Walton who went Christmas shopping for gifts for their fourteen months old son while Lt. Col. Walton stopped for a visit at the Pine Cone, bringing news of another Carmelite, Rear Admiral Turner, whom he had seen "looking hale and hearty" several months ago at a conference somewhere in the South Pacific.

Walton, who has been through three major engagements, including Guadalcanal, stated regretfully that he could not talk of any of them, but he could tell about the natives who come bearing gifts of fiber mats when the Marines land on their islands and whose chiefs are "most punctilious" in making their formal calls upon the commanding general and his staff.

"And the mats are very handy. We use them for carpets in our tents since we never seem to have time to put down tent decks. And spread on our cots they make a cool mattress to sleep on."

Of the Islands themselves, he has a high opinion of those in the Central Pacific, clean, free of insects, reptiles and underbrush, but of New Guinea and the Solomons—He has had opportunity to judge of conditions in the entire Pacific theatre since his work took him on countless plane flights to inspect the far-flung network of communications that included installations wherever the Marines have gained a foot-hold.

Melodic and Bright With Color, School Play Opens Monday

So that everyone will have an opportunity to attend the Christmas play to be presented tonight by high school and Sunset students, two performances are scheduled at Sunset Auditorium, next Monday afternoon at 2:30, the other on Tuesday evening at eight o'clock.

Teachers and students of both schools have been working for weeks to perfect the production, "Why the Chimes Rang," a dramatization of the Raymond McDonald Alden story dramatized by Elizabeth McFadden, a play that gives scope for both the musical and dramatic talents of the students, and opportunity for the art department to create interesting effects in stage setting.

The cast includes:

Steen, Peter Caine and Jon Stark; Holger, Fritz Westerhout and John Haussermann; Uncle Bertel, Jim Jensen; Old Woman, Clair Warner; Angel, Bonnie Dee Olson; Man, Bob Jensen; Priest, Oliver Bassett; Courtier, Martha Moller; Woman, Adele Thompson;

P. O. Still Bears Up Under Record Package Mail

Though bending low under a down pour of Christmas packages and greeting cards, the heaviest in Carmel history, the post office crew, augmented by eight additions to the pay roll, are still on their feet and keeping the mail moving. Postmaster Fred Bechtoldt said yesterday.

Two package windows are operating at the main post office to accommodate the tardy ones who waited until now to do their Christmas mailing. Customers receiving packages get the familiar pink notice in their post office boxes, but collect at the package depot at the Drive-In Market at Eighth and Dolores. During the pre-Christmas rush, the post office is open on Saturday afternoons as well as from 8 to 6 throughout the week.

In addition to tossing packages around and shunting thousands of Christmas cards into post office boxes, the force last week tinkered with the big south wall clock until they got it to running again so that no one would be allowed to forget, "my goodness, how time flies."

will also be included: "Matter cannot change the eternal fact that man exists because God exists. No mortal mind has the might or right or wisdom to create or to destroy. All is under the control of the one Mind, even God." (p. 544).

ALEXANDER BRAILOWSKY, distinguished Russian pianist, will be presented in the second concert of the fall season by the Carmel Music Society on next Sunday afternoon at 2:15. Mrs. Carr Thatcher, in charge of box office at the Carmel Land Company—call 62—reports excellent advance sale, with a few tickets still available.

New York and Buenos Aires audiences have proclaimed Brailowsky the world's greatest interpreter of Chopin after hearing a series of six concerts in which the artist plays the complete Chopin cycle of works. This favorite pupil of the great Theodor Leschetzky will devote one section of his program to the works of Chopin.

things medical—of the provisions made in equipment and service for the care and healing of America's fighting men, he speaks with grave praise.

Not all of Captain Wilson's time following the invasion of Sicily was devoted to the care of wounded servicemen. Most of the native doctors had long since been drained from the countryside, and with the arrival of American forces, the ailing and under-nourished among the civilian population flocked about headquarters, seeking aid.

"They were glad to see the Americans," explains Captain Wilson. "And it was surprising to note how many among them not only could speak English, but had had some knowledge of our country. Quite a few had lived here and were caught by the tide of war while returning on vacation to their old homes. In general, health was fair among the civilians—malnutrition showing itself in the aged and the young children."

Pine Cone-Cymbal readers will recall the episode of Captain Don J. Wilson, Private Joseph Mole and Josephine, the little Sicilian waif, a story which was retold in the August 20th issue from a press dispatch appearing in the daily newspapers throughout the country. Little Josephine, rescued by Private Mole, was brought to the American first aid station where she was tenderly cared for by Captain Wilson, and provided with the kind of food she especially needed.

While in Naples, Captain Wilson had his first glimpse of Vesuvius, and heard reports that both the Germans and Americans had been careful not to let their bombs drop on the ancient city of Pompeii, so that its historic ruins remain exactly as before.

His journey home was made via hospital ship, and as they passed Gibraltar, every passenger who could be moved was assisted to the decks in order to view the impressive face of that fortified rock. The trip home was entirely without incident. Traveling without convoy, the ship sighted neither enemy nor allied planes or sub.

Following his thirty-day visit with his family in Carmel, Captain Wilson will report to McCloskey General Hospital in Temple, Texas, for a check-up on his health.

If there are groups working in the country, who had formerly been members of the Committee, I am sure they are working for what they believe are the best interests of the country. But they do not represent the "America First Committee"; whose sole purpose was to prevent our being forced into this dreadful war. Lions Entertain Ladies With Dinner And Variety Show

Over seventy members and guests attended the Carmel Lion's "Ladies Night" party Tuesday evening at Pine Inn.

Turkey dinner served at the horse-shoe table decorated with Christmas red candles, pine and holly, was followed by a variety show which included musical numbers by Yeoman First Class R. P. Ross, Musician Second Class Joe Torres, enlisted men from Del Monte Pre-Flight, accompanied by Corp. F. S. Smoller at the piano.

The army furnished entertainment with patter and monologue by Pvt. Gordon Ayres, Sgt. Nick L. Bloom and Sgt. Bob Bratt, the latter giving his much loved "Queen Victoria Taking a Bath" and a new version of his famous, "Chinaman Driving Down Monterey Hill in a Model T" which appeared Tuesday night as "Chinaman Driving a Truck on the Burma Road While Being Strafed from a Jap Plane."

Ruth McElroy and Allen Knight, Gay Nineties song and dance team, wound up the show with a nautical number accompanied by Eddie Hopkins.

Guests of the evening were Lt. and Mrs. H. G. Buckwalter, Mr. and Mrs. Tin Fry, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Handley. Postal restrictions against publicizing lotteries make it impossible for the Pine Cone to describe the generous prize for the drawing or to name the fortunate winner.

Fred Goss was in charge of arrangements for the very successful party.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Pearl

Madame Rach-Wolska Given Membership in Eugene Field Society

Membership in the Eugene Field Society was conferred recently upon Madame Rach-Wolska, Mrs. Clifton Williams, for her collection of poems, "The Desert Whispers," published about a year ago by Dorrance and Company.

The Eugene Field Society in St. Louis, Missouri numbers among its membership such distinguished personages as Robert Frost, Walter de la Mare, Eve Curie and Dorothy Canfield.

"Desert Whispers" is one of several books of poetry Madame Rach-Wolska has written. Her most recent work is prose, a book of popular psychology, "Tune in on Your Own Station."

Dear Mrs. Cook:

Unless my newspaper sense has been blacked out this that follows has all the propensities of a good little item for the Pine Cone:

I walked into a little restaurant, called Ann's, on Nob Hill here in San Francisco Saturday evening about 7:30 o'clock. The sole customer, sitting in a booth, was Maria Ince, who lived in Carmel for quite some time three years ago. I had the story of Pal's death, clipped from the Pine Cone, and showed it to her. While she was reading it in walked Harry Lachmund, who lives here on the hill and who was a Carmel Valley inhabitant for several years. The Pal clipping was transferred to him. While he was reading it Mr. and Mrs. Frank Castagna came in. Castagna, you know, was with the Carmel Drug Store for quite a while and is now with Bowerman's here. They took the clipping.

There are one or two interesting points in this story. The mutual interest among us in Pal's death, the fact that there were five of us from Carmel in this one little restaurant on Nob Hill, and that we five were the only customers in the place.

By the way, Ann's is an interesting little eggs, hot cakes, coffee, liver and onions hole-in-the-wall within half a block of where the tycoons of the 90's established their domesticities. Ann is the pivot of the place because she does all the talking. Jack, her husband, is the cook and reticent. Jack found Ann, he says, in the Bronx where, I understand, he originated. Ann is a Hungarian, or was, until, by some hook or crook, she learned all the answers and a complaint judge made her a United States citizen a month ago. Her "eyes are deep as the Devon springs; her hair is black as jet" and she looks like a gypsy. Some irate customer with a fancied grievance the other night heaped calumny on Ann by hissing "Peasant" at her, or can you hiss peasant?, but our select little coterie call her that now in flattery. We somehow like peasants—on Nob Hill.

Babylonia

Babylonia was located between the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers. The rivers washed in dirt and made rich soil. Some of the people came from Asia. The people of Babylonia didn't have any stones, so they had to build their buildings of bricks. They have found ruins of palaces and their decorations tell us stories about the people. Libraries filled with clay books have been found.

Many people of Babylonia were farmers. Some people were sheep raisers and some brick layers. Some of the brick makers put clay together in the right size and shape. These were put in the sun and lay there until they were baked hard so they could use them to make buildings.

The Hanging Gardens

Nebuchadnezzar rebuilt the old city of Babylon and made it his capital. He built the famous Hanging Gardens to please his wife. When these gardens were planted they looked like terraces with flowers and trees planted on them. The king and queen could sit beneath palm trees and ferns and look down upon the city below them.

—Frances Gittinger, grade 6

How Babylonians Wrote

The Babylonians first used pictures for every word instead of writing. They wrote on papyrus which grew in their valley. Then later they used tablets of soft clay. It was easier to make signs than pictures. They used a stylus to make the wedge shaped marks. From their clay tablets we have learned about the Babylonians.

—Bradford Conger, grade 6

Travel in Babylonia

The people of Babylonia became acquainted with other peoples through many wars. Back and forth over this land went the armies of Egypt, Persia and Assyria.

A better way of meeting people was through trade. The Babylonians went on the two great rivers, the Tigris and Euphrates, through many canals and then out into the sea. The boats were carried up the rivers the same way they are now, by ropes tied to horses, donkeys or camels.

—Sara Shaffer, grade 6

The Hebrews

The Hebrews herded their sheep. When the sheep ate all the grass they moved to a different part of the country.

Abraham was the first leader of the Hebrews. Later they moved down into Egypt and became slaves. Then they had a leader named Moses and he led the Hebrews out of Egypt. He led them across the Red Sea and the Egyptians came to get them to take them back by force. Moses led them across the water and saved them.

The Hebrews were not good sailors but they became very good in literature. They taught the world that there is one God. Later David became the king of the Israelites. King Solomon built a beautiful temple where the Hebrews could worship their God, Jehovah.

—Mitchell Steenhoudt, grade 6

Assyrians

Assyrians were war-like people. They invented many war machines. Their inventions were the war chariot and the battering ram. They also used bronze spears and hatchet heads. When they went into other countries they copied lots of things. In this way they spread civilization.

Junior Red Cross

The Junior Red Cross of Sunset school continues to do splendid work. During the recent membership drive held in November, the children contributed $81.65. This brings our total fund to $98.71. Part of this money has been sent to the American Red Cross for dues. A large part will be sent to the National Children's Fund.

The next activity to be undertaken is a drive for waste paper. Sunset will join the high school in this effort. Used paper, magazines and books may be brought. The campaign runs from December 15 (Continued on page 7)

RHYS SMITH IN MEDITERRANEAN

Franklyn Rhys Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Frederick Smith, one of the Carmel boys on the Boise which limped into Philadelphia after sinking six Jap ships October 12, 1942, writes home after participating in the Sicilian invasion.

October 3, 1943

Dearest Mother and All:

Here it is October already. I can remember just about a year ago, October 12, when we had a little skirmish out in the South Pacific. It's been ten months since I was home. It may be another ten months before I'm home again, too, but you can't tell. We thought we couldn't get home for years last October, and then all of a sudden we got in a fight and got banged up and home we came.

Boy, I can sure remember when we were out in the South Pacific how we used to say, "How we would hate to be out in the Mediterranean with all the dive-bombers, E boats and subs." Well, I can sure laugh now and say I'd a lot rather be out here with the German dive-bombers than to compete with the Jap navy again. I suppose I shouldn't think that because we probably will be out there trying again soon.

Since (censored) we have just been lazily sitting here in port, going on liberty every fourth day, field day every Friday and Captain's inspection on Saturday. Just a lot like the old peace time Navy. There are church services this morning in about an hour and a half so I will be going to that.

I have been getting together quite a collection of Italian, French, German and a lot of other coins and paper money. Have you put away the coins and paper money from French and Dutch East Indies and New Zealand that I brought home? When the war is over I want to take all the coins and bills and make a collection book out of them.

I have made a couple of liberties in (censored) and I like it there better than any place in North Africa that I have seen. In a North African port there is always a smell to the whole place and then there are the Arabs! I'll tell you about the Arabs sometime when I'm home. This town seems to be very clean. The streets are kept spotless and there isn't any smell at all, except in some places which is true in most any town. We get plenty of watermelon and grapes to eat and also make a lot of lemonade out of their lemons.

There isn't much to do on a liberty but go around and look at different historical places. I learned that (censored) is one of the places mentioned in the Bible and there are very many ancient churches and other things. Tack (Vaughn Duvall) and I went to visit the catacombs where some famous bishops were buried. Some of the bodies were very well preserved, but most of them were just skeletons. We went through some very beautiful churches and cathedrals which were most impressive. I have some pictures of them to show you when I get back.

Our schedule is run on a four day routine now so I do get a little time for rest and relaxation. The first day we stand our regular circuit watches as operator; the second day we have our turn at producing the ship's press news; the third day our watches again and the fourth is devoted to liberty. That is considered pretty soft.

I am putting in my course for second class now and hope to make it in time to take the final about the tenth. If I can get in it soon enough and pass the final, I ought to be second on the first of November.

Just received your swell birthday card yesterday, three days too early but just about as close as you could expect, huh? I received quite

CONFERENCE OF NATIONS

*Now steps the lofty archetype that lay
Beyond the farthest reaches of the mind
Into the light and clarity of day
Leaving all vague obscurities behind.
United nations place their solemn seal
Upon a writ of brotherhood, and stand,
Above those enmities time could not heal,
For something greater than each native land.*

*Now flames a world-idea above the clouds,
As when the lifting of a mountain height
So far transcends the clinging of its shrouds
That the dull eyes are startled into sight.
Now let the storms rage on and spend their strength;
The shape of peace is manifest at length!*

—DORA HAGEMEYER

THOUGHT BEFORE A JOURNEY

*Tomorrow I shall follow a thread of stars
Out into the free night;
And I shall find my way
To realms undreamed—havens too great for me.
But the stars will be friendly,
And the long wonder of their dwelling-place
All at once will be my home—
The silver path
Somehow familiar;
And I shall be small, and quiet, waiting—Tomorrow.*

—CHARLES BALLARD

OUT OF THIS REMEMBERING

*I, vulnerable to beauty
Walk this old familiar path
Now laced with moonlight
And the blurred edge of shadow,
Holding my heart as in a sightless shell
That it be not punctured by the needled silver
Of the pine trees
Nor bruised by the blowing wind,
Seeking only to hurry out of this loveliness,
Out of this poignant remembering—
But there is yet the clearing
Where the long slopes fall to the sea,
And beauty sounds like music
Up the shining sky
To the bright climax of the moon,
And I could almost wish that I were blind
Than that such things remain when you are gone.*

REVIEWS

a few letters this time. Tack said you visited his mother not long ago. (Tack is Vaughn Duvall, also of Carmel, Ed.)

Bob Gansel got a letter from someone at the Carmel high school and in it it said that Mr. Miller was in the field artillery somewhere in North Carolina and that just about all the old teachers were scattered around in different parts of the service. Gee, they must be drafting everybody. You better watch out they don't get you, Dad.

We had a group of USO boys over on the ship yesterday and it was sure swell. They had an accordionist from New York, a magician from San Francisco and a cowboy from Texas, and it was real States side-show stuff, too.

There just isn't any news to tell you. Hasn't been anything happening lately. We have been informed that we can tell about our playing a part in the Italian invasion. We can't tell just where. It's all past now and we shall probably be in on another one before you know it.

CHIEF FRATIES EXPLAINS

Unless your dog has a driver's license, he won't be classed as an attendant by the Carmel police department when you leave your car parked double in his exclusive care. Grandma, sitting in the back seat, holding the baby, likewise is ineligible as an "attendant," at least for the car.

There has been considerable confusion in the minds of Carmel citizens on the question of when a double parked car is attended, hence, not a candidate for a citation from the police department, and when it is "unattended" and out of bounds.

Chief Roy Fraties offered to clear up the matter for the Pine Cone readers this week.

First he quoted the California Vehicle Code: "No person shall stop, park or leave standing any vehicle whether attended or unattended, except when necessary to avoid conflict with other traffic or in compliance with the directions of a peace officer or traffic control signal device, in any of the following places . . ." Among the list of "following places," is included "at the curb or edge of a highway." "Highway" in turn is defined as "a way or place of whatever nature, publicly maintained and open to use of the public for purpose of vehicular travel." Carmel police take this to mean Carmel streets and feel that they may give traffic citations to anyone parking double in Carmel whether the car is attended or unattended. However, since Carmel does not have time limit parking and slots along the curbs are scarce, and it is hardly decent to expect people to drive around and around hunting parking on the present gas allowance for A tickets, Police Chief Roy Fraties has instructed his men to allow double parking provided the car is attended.

By attended he means someone behind the wheel who has a driver's license and is prepared to move the car on an instant's notice. If mother wants to double park while she gets a loaf of bread, a bottle of milk and three lamb chops for dinner, and has no one with her but Tommy, age 11, she had better remain behind the wheel herself and send Tommy in for the loaf of bread, bottle of milk and three lamb chops. Tommy is not qualified as an attendant. Nor is the aforementioned grandma in the back seat holding the baby an attendant in the legal sense, even though she may possess a driver's license, for she's not in a position to move the car quickly if it must be moved while the driver is away.

Prize example of misunderstanding was the case of the young woman who plaintively complained to the Chief when he left a citation on her unattended double-parked car, "But it wasn't unattended—my dog was there."

Christmas Boxes Feature of AAUW Yuletide Party

Twenty-five Christmas boxes of "goodies" for boys in the service on outpost duty along the coast are requested from the American Association of University Women as their contribution to Christmas cheer in this community. These boys are prevented by their assignment from having a part in Army indoor festivities, hence the Red Cross is soliciting the individual boxes filled with nuts, cookies, fruit, candies, and cake.

The association members will bring the boxes in holiday wrappings to the meeting at Miss Gertrude Rendtorff's home on Camino Real tomorrow, Saturday, afternoon, when they will hold their annual Yuletide party. Program of the occasion will feature songs, traditions, wassail bowl, with Carmel members acting as hostesses to members from "over the hill." It is the annual custom to bring gifts for some group that merits remembrance, and this time recipients will be the soldiers on lonely outpost duty. —L. L. T.

Bertha to Have New Year's Performance

"Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl, plays this week-end, Saturday and Sunday night, December 18, 19, at the First Theatre, Monterey, but there will be no showing Christmas week. The Troupers of the Gold Coast are going to spend Christmas with their families, at home.

Extensive preparations are being made, however, for the annual New Year's performance, which has become a tradition at the First Theatre. Reservations are already pouring in for the riotous New Year's Eve show, and for the Sunday night following.

All Troupers of the Gold Coast are invited to the annual "At Home" of the Troupers in the old bar of the First Theatre following the New Year's Eve performance. For six years now the Troupers have assembled for this festive evening, messages and telegrams coming from out-of-town Troupers to wish Happy New Year to the active group.

"Bertha," with the single exception of Christmas week, will continue running each week-end, until the opening of the new show in early February.

Will the Moth Ball Expert Please Call?

The Pine Cone-Cymbal would be most grateful if Mr. Delphus Kindred would call at the Pine Cone office on Dolores street to pick up his mail. The Pine Cone would not mind keeping it, if it were nice friendly mail, but it has a definitely "Oh, Yeah!" and "Sez, You!" tone.

Moreover, the Pine Cone has no idea why Mr. Kindred's mail has been put in the Pine Cone box except that the post office doesn't know where else to put it, and seeing as how the Pine Cone once carried a piece about the moth ball seer and his prognostications, the post office probably thinks he's a Pine Cone friend. And maybe he is at that. The Pine Cone has a good many friends for which the Pine Cone is duly grateful, but if he knows the Pine Cone, he has the advantage of the Pine Cone, because the Pine Cone does not know him though sufficiently energetic measures were taken several months ago to make his acquaintance.

The Kindred Affair, or The Great Moth Ball Mystery, was first brought to the Pine Cone's attention when a little piece came out in the Any Week column of Colliers to the effect that a Mr. Delphus Kindred of Carmel had claimed he could predict the future by shaking up some moth balls in a cigar box. He said the moth balls told him that on or before the eighteenth of November of this year a large submarine would arrive in an American port with Adolf Hitler, Hermann Goering, Joseph Goebbels and the body of Benito Mussolini on board.

This sounded as if Mr. Kindred was a very peculiar person and since peculiar persons are something of a rarity in Carmel, the Pine Cone undertook a systematic search for him even to the extent of appealing to its readers to assist in bringing him to light, with such negative results that the conclusion was inescapable that if Mr. Kindred lived in Carmel, it must be under the name of Rollo Pettipaw or maybe Joe Smith. So the Pine Cone dismissed Delphus Kindred and his moth balls from its mind. But not so Collier's readers. The mail is now arriving asking, "How about that prediction of yours that was supposed to come true on November 18; How about it, Mr. Kindred?"

How about it indeed?

In the Cottage by Sterling Bridge Alberto Works on Stage Lyric

mond. At the time of the San Francisco earthquake and fire the American Theatre, now the Embassy, was under the family management and the fact that the dynamiters by-passed it has always been attributed to an interview between one of David Alberto's uncles and the foreman of the dynamiting crew. Just what form his persuasion took was never revealed, but the building remained standing, a solitary landmark in the district.

At the age of eleven David Alberto gave his first concert in San Francisco and five years later, in Vienna, he was introduced by Frank La Forge to the famed Leschetizky, with whom he studied for the next four years, his studies augmented by frequent trips to Berlin, where he listened to and was heard in private concert by the outstanding musical artists of the time, among them Gadsby and Sembrich. Established critics, noting especially this young American newcomer's interpretation of Beethoven and Chopin, praised his rare tone quality and hailed him as "the second Paderewsky."

Back once more in his native San Francisco, David Alberto continued to receive public acclaim for his concert work, an acclaim which under most circumstances would have confirmed an artist in his choice of a career. But for David Alberto favorable criticisms, applause which on many occasions mounted into an ovation, did not count as a determining factor in his life. One of the group which included George Sterling, Jimmie Hopper, Bertha and Perry Newberry and many others who loved to spend long hours in the Piedmont studio of Xavier Martinez, discussing art, philosophy and life, David Alberto was in his own way as stubborn an individualist as was his deeply-revered "Marty." In 1921, when he first came to Carmel accompanied by his wife, Iris, whom he had met during his days in Vienna, where she had gone from her native Stockholm to attend boarding school—the intent of his concert manager was that he should remain three days, give the three performances which had been booked in advance and straightway depart on an arranged nationwide tour. What David and Iris did was to stay for three weeks, then return to Oakland just long enough for David to dismiss his manager, and Iris to pack their belongings.

"I knew at once that here was where I was meant to live," he says simply. "It was very strange, in a way. As a child I used to spend my vacations in Capitola, and across the bay, far to the south, I could see tantalizing barriers which they told me were the hills of Monterey. I talked about them constantly. It was an obsession with me to know what lay behind them. Later, when I heard of George Sterling and Jack London, and learned to connect them with the world beyond those magic hills, my interest deepened. I used to go about reciting:

I'm content
To pay my rent
And live on alone.
"There was an odd coincidence, too, between our coming to Carmel and the film version of Jack London's Valley of the Moon. Jack London was represented as stepping out of a certain house on the shore of Lake Merritt in Oakland at one point in the film, and when he next appeared, it was in Carmel, three years later. The actual house was our home, Villa Capriciosa—where Iris and I lived for three years, and from which we came directly to Carmel."

From his arrival in Carmel, David Alberto began to devote less and less of his time to public concerts. He has always been a sought-after teacher, and there was time spent, too, on the half dozen or so compositions for the piano which appear in the catalogues and New York display windows of Breitkopf and Haertel well-known publishers of Beethoven, Bach and other classical composers.

"I came gradually to an age," he explains, "where I realized that much of my life had been spent in a pursuit for which I was psychologically unsuited. A public performer should be an extrovert—an exhibitionist. I think I am an almost perfect example of the opposite type. Perhaps I knew this clearly as a very small child, when I used to insist that I loved human beings almost as much as I loved animals and the growing things of nature. And when I had lived for a while in Carmel, becoming more and more familiar with its peace and solitude and natural beauty, this knowledge of myself became clear again, so that I could no longer attempt to be the thing for which nature did not fit me."

Laying aside a career on which he started as a child prodigy, for which he studied under Leschetizky and pursued with material as well as artistic rewards through hundreds of concert appearances, has not meant idleness for David Alberto. His life has been divided, since early manhood, into ten-year cycles, in each of which he has labored slowly, painstakingly, toward the solution of some problem in aesthetics. First came his scholarly article, "Why Pianoforte Tone?" explaining the mystery of varying qualities of pianoforte tone, published in The Etude and other journals devoted to the art of music. Nor did this treatise fall unnoticed among the musical fraternity. To the Alberto home in Carmel came such artists as Artur Schnabel, Harold Bauer, Robert Schmitz, Antonia Brico, eager to discuss the subject matter with its author. Charles Cooper lectured on the Alberto theory in San Francisco. Thomas Edison wrote to him, seeking an answer to his own problem relating to acoustics. The use of a laboratory at the University of Iowa was offered for his further research.

Other problems with which David Alberto has labored until he could state their solution to his own satisfaction in book and article form are how to elevate the physical act of piano playing to an aesthetic plane and how to reduce the aesthetic sense to a physically comprehensive mental activity.

Now he is embarked upon the writing and composition of what the uninitiated might be tempted to call an opera. But David Alberto is very exact upon this point.

"No," he insists. "It is rather a criticism of what is known as opera—an example of how I would correct its fallacies."

He explains that he is indebted to his friend Dr. E. O. Sisson for the far more individual characterization of his composition as A Stage Lyric for Voices and Orchestra.

The idea for its plot, or rather, theme, for he considers the conventional story unsuited to musical interpretation, occurred to him many years ago, and he has been working ever since upon the libretto. It is characteristic of David Alberto that he considers this composition in the light of a problem, a series of problems, to solve.

"Why is opera unsuccessful in English?" was once asked among the little group who talked over matters artistic and aesthetic.

"Possibly," suggested Jimmie Hopper, "because it has always been written by one who lived too close to the English-speaking scene to preserve the illusion of romance. For example, Bret Harte, who had only a superficial idea of the west, caught and transmitted the full flavor of its romance. It is unfortunate to know a place too well."

"I should not have that trouble," David Alberto smiles, "for though I am an American, I have lived far apart from the actual life of America."

It is his belief that American opera, by focusing its attention upon the Mexican, the Indian, the Negro, has failed as yet to interpret the average man of the American village street. The English language itself poses a problem, too, since it contains so many unsingable words and syllables, or words which fail to carry in song the desired emotion. He does not, therefore, proceed with definite words, but makes them grow out of the mood and the music.

His method of procedure in the composition of his music offers a drastic departure from the past, and is based upon the fact that consonance represents the point of rest, while dissonance represents activity; that the strong beats of rhythm are also points of rest and the weak points rhythmically proceed to stronger beats.

"The present theory of music," he explains, "usually places consonance on stronger beats and dissonances haphazardly as connecting points; consequently we have harmonic points of rest occurring upon rhythmic points of rest. This I consider an aesthetic fallacy, to be corrected through placing the most dissonant harmonies which suggest motion upon the less active rhythmic points, thereby allotting to music a certain active flow, an activity within the music itself, which the older method failed to achieve."

He has reached the stage in his work where, as he expresses it, "seconds have become a lengthy period of time, and the problem is to fill them with mounting interest."

To one as sensitive to his surroundings as David Alberto, both the past and the present of the delightful home which he and Iris inhabit on Santa Fe should contribute mightily to creative inspiration. Built in the early days by Redfern Mason and John Northern Hilliard and purchased by the Albertos after the latter's death, it faces the ravine, spanned midway by the George Sterling Bridge, on which face also the homes built by Herbert Heron, Fred Becholdt and George Sterling—later acquired by Jimmie Hopper. A rendezvous of the old-time literati, under its portal has passed through the years a never-ending procession of poets, painters, sculptors, dancers—for, yes, Isadora Duncan was once a guest—and musicians.

On Christmas, as every day, we'll "keep 'em rolling"

THE HEAVY, URGENT TRAINS of war will roll as usual over our rails through the twenty-four hours of December 25th.

S.P. engineers and firemen, conductors, dispatchers, yardmen, brakemen—thousands of men and women of the many score crafts required to operate the West's biggest railroad—will be at their posts of duty.

With the "tools" of our trade—locomotives, cars, tracks and signals—we will move the war trains. We will move service men on furlough and members of their families, plus an enormous volume of food and industrial shipments.

Yes, the people of our railroad will be hard at work on Christmas. But still this Day will have for us a bright and special meaning—because you folks who live along our lines have made the Christmas Spirit so very real to us.

Carmel Past Still Glamorous Subject To Los Gatos Press

From the Los Gatos, Cal., Mail-News & Star.

WHEN CARMEL WAS YOUNG

Many years ago when Carmel was a tiny village but growing, Perry Newberry was the Horace Greeley of the town. Perry had served time on the Chronicle as one of its star reporters. Like most newspaper men on the big dailies, his ambition was to own a small town weekly and retire from the major league, so to speak, take it easy and be one of a town's big shots. An opportunity came and Perry boxed his typewriter in the local room of the Chronicle and took passage on a train Carmel-wards.

At this time Carmel had no sidewalks or street lights or concrete streets or mayor or fancy shops or sewers or hotel. The population was largely made up of artists and writers of Bohemian tendencies. They lived and worked in their studios, had their high jinks, and all they asked was to be let alone. They were happy in their solitude and their dust and dirt.

But despite it all the literary and artistic fame of Carmel spread afar. It attracted barbarians with money sacks, who came and settled around these jolly and isolated Bohemians. And were they happy about it? Yes, as joyful as if they had been a cloud of locusts or the bubonic plague. To add to their discomfort, these uninvited foreigners, who were accustomed to modern methods of living, began to agitate for sidewalks and for street lights and for plumbing, and here was where the Horace Greeley of Carmel went to town with all his vim and vigor. In his paper Newberry told these invaders: "Carmel wants to live its own life, doesn't want to be a big town, doesn't want to grow and be like other places. It's against progress and prosperity. We don't want to walk on sidewalks. We are against street lights—they blind us." Then he would finish an editorial with a line like this: "People who don't want to accept Carmel as it is should beat it to other parts to live."

Result was Newberry made Carmel famous. It was the only town in America combatting progress. While the campaign was on Clarence Mamsher, who was then publishing a bank monthly—he then being manager of the Los Gatos First National—got into the scrap. He began plugging for Los Gatos just as hard as Newberry bombed every effort made to bring Carmel up to date. He reminded Newberry that Los Gatos wanted more sidewalks, lights and parks. Mamsher invited the unwanted citizens of Carmel to come and live in Los Gatos. How many accepted

Lorena Ray

Lorena Ray, who was born in Ashville, North Carolina, and has lived with her friend Emily Pitkin at Carmel Highlands for twenty-two years, passed away in her sleep the night of December 10.

The noble span of her life of almost 79 years included service as a Red Cross nurse in the Spanish American War. She was in one of the first classes at Johns Hopkins when it was as much the duty of a nurse to wash the floor as to bathe a patient and that patient expected and demanded twenty-four hours' service for a meagre wage.

She worked with Dr. Osler, Dr. Kelly and other doctors and surgeons of the early famous days of Johns Hopkins and was their friend. For some years she worked in the mountains of North Carolina where, while nursing desperately ill cases, she often shared the family's diet of potatoes and little else. She was the efficient head of a number of hospitals and later brought back to health many tuberculosis cases given up by the doctors, by her conscientious and stern regime and her sympathetic companionship.

She had a rare gift for making and keeping friends. Children adored her and she kept a basket of toys and books always ready for her young visitors. One of her closest friendships was one of seventeen years with a little Maltese terrier.

She was content in the latter part of her life to busy herself in her house, garden and community, while continuing her lifelong habit of making friends in every walk of life. Her passing will leave an ache in many hearts—for the world was her family and suffering humanity was her child. —E.P.

Not much like Christmas

A WHITE CHRISTMAS . . . sleigh bells in the snow . . . the laughter of little children, and then—clear and nostalgic on the frosty air—the miracle of tiny voices singing "Peace on earth, good will to men." There's the Christmas we all dream of—but especially those of our sweethearts, sons and brothers who are fighting in the muck and mud of a trench . . . Think how they must dream of it! And they do . . .

"It was like any other day—" so wrote a soldier (a boy you might know) of Christmas last year. "We landed about noon and tried to sleep . . . In the evening we went into a funny little African town and saw an old movie . . . then turned in. Not much like Christmas."

He's in the tropics now, that boy; it won't seem much like Christmas there, either. But this year—this Christmas—the folks back home are buying him the one present that can help to bring him back—back to a white Christmas—War Bonds! Decide now to give your boy an extra War Bond or two! And so there'll always be a Christmas, make every gift "The Present With a Future"—War Bonds!

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

The High School Melodrama and Olio

Wednesday, Dec. 8, the Carmel high school drama class presented to the students of Carmel Hi, for the sum of 10 cents, a breath-taking melodrama, entitled "He Ain't Done Right by Nell," followed by a hilarious Olio, directed by Jim Jensen, and consisting of Carol Walker, Jim Jensen, Bonnie Dee Olson, Adele Thompson, Ann Gambee, Claire Warner, Suzita Cecil, Diane Tait, Robert Jensen, Francis Shea, Oliver Bassett and Molly Osgood as performers.

The melodrama was directed by Miss Beeson, dramatics coach, and the cast consisted of Mary McElroy, Oliver Bassett, Joan Carr, Wynne Hutchings, Mary Gregory, Claire Warner and Jimmy Hole.

All together the melodrama and olio lasted about an hour and was such a great success, it was repeated three times.

Basketball

Basketball started with a good turn out of approximately thirty-five boys, and out of the two teams, the lightweights seem to have the edge over the heavyweights as far as good fast basketball is concerned.

The first game scheduled is the game with Salinas, Friday, December 17th at 2:45 p.m. in the gym. This will be for the benefit of the Bardarson memorial fund and is not a league game.

The lineups for the Heavyweights and Lightweights are as follows:

Lightweights: Bud Yerkes, Del Wermuth, guards; Bob Weer, center; Art Templeton, John Weigold, forwards.

Subs: Treat Arnold, Tom Hefling, David Lorente, Clayton Neil, Heavyweights: Bruce King, Howard Lockwood, guards; Martin Erwin, center; Russ Bohlke, Dick Uzzell, forwards.

Subs: Perry Brown, Bob Kolf, Milton Thompson, Jim Greenan, Bob Bell, Dennis Gorman and Bill Rissell.

This promises to be one of the best games of the season as everybody is going to attend in order to contribute to this worth while fund, not only the rooters, but the referees, cheer leaders, and players.

So folks, I think you all should come. It will not only give you a chance to see how good our boys are in action, but the contributions that go to the Bardarson Memorial Fund will go in good cause.

Freshmen vs. Sophomores

The Sophomore girls have won their second volleyball game, this time from the Freshman girls. The Freshmen apparently were a bit scared, and because of this there wasn't much team work on their part. The Sophomores are really hitting hard this year in all their sports. The yeat the Freshmen to the tune of 33 to 20.

And snow ten thousand summers old."

—J. R. Lowell

Although the wind may be chilly, it will not dampen the school spirit for the "Winter Ball," which will take place December 18th at the high school. The "Winter Ball" is considered the affair of the year, with the girls in formal dancing frocks, and the boys decked out in their best bib and tucker.

The students in general charge are: Joan Thorn, Jack Fremont, Russ Bohlke, Jim Greenan, and Mary Jane Reel. The reception committee is composed of Norval Yerkes, Del Wilson and George Moller. On the clean up committee are: Joan Thorn, Jack Fremont, Russell Bohlke, Bud Yerkes, Jim Greenan, Carla Lepori, Betty Powell, Mary Jane Reel and Baird Bardarson. The people who have been kind enough to act as patrons for the dance are: Miss Sheldon, Mr. Calley, Mrs. Brey and Mrs. Dormody.

The Junior Class is in charge of the refreshments.

—Mary Jane Reel

A Sad Day for the Seniors

The Sophomores shattered the belief that age and experience are winning factors in Tuesday's volleyball fray against the Seniors. The final tally was 30-13, Sophomores way up on top. To start the game, the Seniors had only four players signed up though by closing time there were eight Senior girls on the court. The Sophomores had two complete teams, the Sophs, by far the best, but the Seniors show some promise.

Court Reforms

Last Thursday the legislature voted to accept a bill presented by Judge Warren, that provides for a means of experimentation in the court organization without delegating too much power to any one person.

There will be three organizations: a board of appeal from the Student Court, which will oversee all the actions of every member of the court; an Investigating Commission which will investigate all problems concerning the students; and a Board of Legal Advisors to the legislature which will scan all laws for imperfection in wording and meaning.

"Oh There's Something About a Soldier"

The Cadet Corps of Carmel Hi will have its debut today, Friday, during the noon hour as part of a rally being held to glorify the opening of the basketball season. It will be on parade to show what has been learned during the past few weeks. Squads will be under the instruction of Cadet Corporals in this display of military knowledge. As most of these cadets will go into some branch of the armed service after completing their school work, the training they are now receiving will be invaluable to them.

Leaders Take Over

Christmas arrived early this season for the members of the Leaders Club—at least for four pledges. With the ingenuity typical of high school females the four pledges, Carolyn "Tinsel" Cory, Carle "Cypress" La Pori, Elizabeth "Burlap Stockings" Williamson and Alice "Won't You Marry Me?" Williamson, were trimmed as Christmas trees. Their costume consisted of sheets, tinsel, the trimmings, burlap sacks and pine tree boughs, while Woolworth's best cosmetics were plastered on their pussies.

Greeting fellow students in regalia was not the only punishment endured by the neophytes.

During the noon hour they scrubbed the steps by the library with tooth brushes, and each of the girls had a task to perform; this was fulfilled, even if unwilling.

ingly. Aside from what the pledges thought, the students loved it.

At 3:30 they were taken to the gym and given three final tests. Their spirits, though slightly dampened, revived after passing their tests. Everyone then went to Miss Sheldon's home where the Christmas spirit was revived.

Incidentally, each pledge carried an egg with her to every class where teachers signed them. If one of the girls was unlucky enough to break one of said eggs she devoured it, but with a noticeable lack of gusto.

Paper Drive

Paper, paper and then more paper is the watchword in the new drive which is being sponsored by the Junior Red Cross at Carmel high school.

Challenged by Monterey high school on a two to one basis, Carmel Hi student body is confident that the patriotism of the people of Carmel and the ingenuity and enthusiasm of the students will be such as to insure its winning this friendly race.

Christmas Displays

Miss Burtis' art classes and the office are getting ready for Christmas. The display windows are covered with holly and newly made Yulitide cards, the work of the art classes.

In the lower corridor, the glass windows are covered with designs of white to represent snowflakes and, in the corner window is a representation of the blessed Virgin with a beautiful star sending out rays behind it to represent the star of Bethlehem. To be sure, Carmel high school is getting the Christmas spirit.

Decorations in the large dance hall are in charge of Muriel Brust and Ann Messing. The Christmas tree in the ball room is to be trimmed by Patricia Bates, Meta Gossler, Betty Lou Fonteneau.

Gifts are in preparation for each member of the armed forces and a delicious Christmas night buffet supper will be served.

Instruction For H. S. Paper Drive

By WALTER WARREN

Paper is used for a vast amount of military and non-military supplies, including everything from packing to sun-resisting helmets. Thus it is an essential and important part of our war effort, and, like so many precious things nowadays, we do not have enough of it. Due to the manpower shortage the United States will be forced to produce less paper pulp this year, when the need for it is greater, than it did last year. It is up to you to help alleviate this shortage.

In order to improve this situation a waste paper drive will be held from December 15 to January 15, 1944. Because of the lack of available transportation, house to house canvassing will be impossible, but those having paper and able to get transportation are asked to bring their bundles to the Carmel high school. Those who are unable to get transportation may call Carmel 1352-J or write Box 161, giving the location of the house to the nearest cross street, their name and the amount of paper which they wish to give. It is requested that newspapers and magazines be bundled separately, that newspapers be tied open flat, and that waste cardboard, heavy paper and all other waste paper be boxed or bundled tightly.

The paper will be sold immediately to junk dealers. The money thus collected will go to the Carmel high school chapter of the Junior Red Cross.

OFF TO NOVA SCOTIA

Lee Crowe departed on Thursday for Nova Scotia, where he will spend the holidays with his parents, returning to Carmel some time in February.

Von Urban Trial Continues Dec. 29

The Rudolph Von Urban trial had been recessed until December 29 when the defense attorneys intend to present witnesses to combat testimony of Dr. Joseph Catton, who appeared as an expert for the prosecution Thursday.

Charged with practicing medicine without a license the Carmel Highlands "sexologist" took the stand in his own defense the early part of the week, recounting his education and experience in medicine and psychiatry in Europe. He said that he had not practiced medicine since his arrival in the United States several years ago, but on cross examination was confronted with records of a trial in Oakland when he had been called in as an expert witness and by his own testimony had described himself as a "medical man, a psychiatrist."

Thursday Dr. Joseph Catton, Clinical Professor of Medicine at Stanford University, a specialist in nervous and mental disorders and psychiatrist at the induction center No. 1 at San Francisco, appeared as a witness for the prosecution, to define what constitutes the practice of medicine and psychiatry. He has been called on a number of occasions as an expert witness, among the most celebrated, the Ruth Judd trial.

A son was born to Major and Mrs. L. D. Adams of Carmel Highlands on Saturday, December 11, at the Community Hospital.

Getsinger Presents Barderson Picture To Carmel High School

A picture of the late Otto Barderson, former superintendent of Carmel schools, was presented to the school board at its meeting Tuesday night as the gift of Superintendent J. W. Getsinger.

The photograph, an enlargement from a picture that appeared in a school annual, is to hang in the office of the administration building.

Superintendent Getsinger announced to the board that portions of the high school grounds had been closed to automobile traffic, the lower road to the gymnasium closed by post and chain which could be opened when occasion demanded, but the area behind the gymnasium closed permanently.

A report on a revised plan for teaching formal grammar in both Sunset and the high school was received with approval by the board.
